MONTHLY SUMMARY

During October the major market influences were the Hamas/Israeli war, ongoing increases in 10-year bonds, an incredibly strong US 3Q GDP growth number (Over 8% nominal) and the bulk of quarterly company result releases. Investors are oscillating between the risks of tighter financial conditions with sustained high interest rates and the possibilities of resilient, albeit slower, economic growth while inflation falls sufficiently to allow an easing of financial conditions. We continue to see evidence of slowing discretionary spending and slowing inflation while results revealed the early evidence of the surge in spend and usage associated with AI. Away from our portfolio evidence of poor returns on many of the investments behind renewables (solar, wind, grid projects) was a reminder that large new addressable markets do not necessarily mean good investment opportunities and careful analysis of competitive activity and economic models is required. Internally, we updated our long-term rate analyses and revised our risk-free rate assumptions, mostly upwards, given the case for long term rates remaining at somewhat higher levels looking forward. It seems quite plausible that long term rates are more volatile in coming years relative to the past one to two decades.

In October, the portfolio was relatively flat. We held a higher level of cash during the period given risks were elevated into October. Price gains were led by Netflix, Microsoft, AIA Group, United Health and Chipotle Mexican Grill, all up over 5% in the month, due to excellent quarterly results, and AIA recouped weakness from last month. Our top two holdings, Microsoft and Amazon were also the largest contributors. Microsoft delivered excellent 1Q24 results to end September and continues to execute superbly against the large opportunity it is creating around AI. We are seeing evidence that IT spending patterns are stable to improving, with increasing demand for AI cloud services, and improving global PC demand. Amazon's quarter results resoundingly beat market expectations as all businesses saw materially higher margins and its guidance came in well ahead of expectations. We continue to see significant opportunity for Amazon. In a weak market, a few holdings retraced in October. The largest, albeit relatively small detractors to the portfolio in the month, were Lowe's and Mastercard. Lowe's reports later in November and we expect short term weakness in sales trends given the recent sharp rise in mortgage rates to over 8% is likely to weigh on home renovation project spending, which was likely reflected in the short-term price fall. Mastercard has reported continued excellent results (sales up 14% and EPS up 26%) and there were no material changes to the compelling growth outlook for the business.

Index movements and stock contributors/detractors are based in local currency terms unless stated otherwise.

<sup>3</sup>Sectors are internally defined. Geographical exposure is calculated on a look through basis based on underlying revenue exposure of individual companies held within the portfolio. Exposures may not sum to 100% due to rounding.

<sup>4</sup> Shows how much the stock has contributed to the fund's gross return for the period in AUD. Excludes non-disclosed positions established in the latest quarter.
