MONTHLY SUMMARY

April saw global markets finally take a pause after a significant rally starting in November last year. This reflected an evolving view on whether US economic strength would mean inflation would not break lower, or indeed even re-emerge, and thus the anticipated Federal Reserve policy rate cuts would be later and less. It was also a period of earnings (or sales in Europe) results across many companies and the general tone was positive. This has meant markets' forward estimates are in aggregate being revised higher, creating a positive backdrop for equities. We continue to anticipate a reasonable "Goldilocks-like" economic growth backdrop accompanied by a gradual cooling in inflation and the interest rates headwinds in April to dissipate in coming months.

The portfolio had a weaker month of performance with the main detractors being Ulta, our recently added US Beauty retailer that at a conference gave a cautious update reflecting the Sephora expansion in the US, and a few of our strong structural growth exposures. These saw some de-rating given the above shifts in rate expectations. The de-ratings were concentrated in Microsoft, Salesforce and Meta, which retraced by 7%, 11% and 11% respectively in the month. On the positive side, Alphabet, Chipotle Mexican Grill and Yum! Brands all rose in a falling market. Alphabet has rallied as concerns about search disruption peaked while the upside opportunity from Gen AI and cost reductions garnered attention.

Index movements and stock contributors/detractors are based in local currency terms unless stated otherwise.

⁴ Sectors are internally defined. Geographical exposure is calculated on a look through basis based on underlying revenue exposure of individual companies held within the portfolio. Exposures may not sum to 100% due to rounding.

⁵ Shows how much the stock has contributed to the fund's gross return for the period in AUD. Excludes non-disclosed positions established in the latest quarter.
